

About Our North Carolina Personal Injury Law Firm

Helping Injured People Like You is What We Do

More than 40 years ago, Martin & Jones was formed with the goal to help people – just like you. Since then, our personal injury lawyers have devoted their practices to caring for people and families who have suffered from the wrongful acts of others. We are proud to represent people from all walks of life, and the firm has the experience and resources to aggressively do so, regardless of how large a company or adversary the defendant is or what kind of resources they have at their disposal. In fact, we have successfully represented individuals in claims against 30 of the 100 largest corporations in America.

The attorneys at Martin & Jones are not afraid of a challenge. Our tenacity and commitment to the well-being of our clients is what sets us apart from other firms. We have earned a reputation for taking on some of the toughest and most serious cases, for never backing down, and for always putting our clients' needs first.

Every individual at our North Carolina personal injury law firm – from our front office personnel to our senior partners – understands that this may be the first time you've ever needed the assistance of a personal injury attorney.

Whether you have worked with lawyers in the past or this is your first time consulting with an attorney, we will make sure you feel comfortable and confident with your attorney, the legal support staff, and the representation you are getting. At Martin & Jones, our entire staff – especially our approachable and friendly attorneys – genuinely care about you and your family, and it shows in everything we do.
